Introduction

Reigate Grammar School has regard for their duty “to prevent people from being drawn into terrorism”¹ and that this duty needs to be at the forefront when inviting visiting speakers to the school, or indeed when encouraging pupils to attend lectures or events arranged externally.

Preventing political indoctrination of pupils

“RGS does not seek to prevent pupils from learning about political views or discussing political issues in school. On the contrary, this is an important part of pupils’ development towards becoming independent thinkers with clear awareness of their place in society. However, we have a duty to seek to prevent negative outcomes through any one-sided discussion of political or social viewpoints.

Accordingly, we ensure that we do not encourage pupils to support particular political viewpoints through our teaching of the curriculum. Where a particular political viewpoint is represented, we take all reasonably practicable steps to ensure that pupils are offered a balanced presentation of opposing views. Examples of this can be found in the curriculum for subjects such as History, Politics and T&P, as well as in extra-curricular activities such as Model United Nations, Politics talks and in assemblies.”

(taken from the RGS Policy for the Spiritual, Moral, Social and Cultural development of pupils, including the active promotion of Fundamental British Values)

We encourage students to broaden their learning perspectives by attending regional lectures and events accompanied by staff and by participating in talks delivered by invited speakers and guests. The latter are arranged by colleagues and often involve repeat visitors, former students, parents, professional acquaintances and those seen at various events. Visiting speakers are considered for suitability in accordance with the Prevent Duty.

Procedures

The procedure for inviting in a guest who has been checked for suitability is:

- Confirm a date with Assistant Head i/c Calendar
- Inform Reception of details so that ID badges can be issued; these must be worn at all times by visitors who can be distinguished by red lanyards
- Visiting Speaker form to be left with Reception Staff for completion on date of visit
- ID check should be conducted on arrival at reception
- Sign-in and out arrangements are notified to guests
- Guests are accompanied at all times by a member of RGS staff and are never alone with any students
