English Entrance Exam

Reading Extract

Read this extract; the narrator has won a prize holiday and is at the airport.

We formed a small crowd in the big, confused mass of travellers in the Miami airport departure carrying a fluorescent orange puffa jacket, who looked like a new-born wildebeest, stumbling over his own legs.

Glossary of unfamiliar words (in order of appearance in the text)
Conservationist - a person who acts to help the environment and wildlife
Conservation - the protection and efficient use of natural resources
Bio-diversity - the variety of life on Earth
Rosettes - an imitation of a rose used in badges or as an ornament
Wildebeest - large type of antelope or deer which has a large head and horns

We were prizewinners in a competition run by the Planet Savers TV programme. Part of the time we'd be staying on a wildlife conservation station deep in the Ecuador rainforest; part of the time we'd be visiting the Galapagos Islands.

I'd enjoyed flying from Gatwick as an unaccompanied minor. It was the first time l'd been alone on a plane, but that hadn't frightened me at all. Now I was beginning to feel scared. I'd won a place on this trip by thinking up a bio-diversity experiment about beetles. But I suppose I'm a typical nerd, good at the details, not very smart at seeing the larger picture. I'd gone in for the competition because I liked my science teacher, and it had been like doing any interesting piece of homework. I had not thought it through.

Two presenters from the Planet Savers TV programme were coming with us - Neil Cannon and Georgie McCarthy. They were at the centre of a chattering group, tall, thin Neil with his spiky ginger hair and freckly tan, Georgie with her glowing dark skin and her cheeky smile. Both of them looked very friendly and cheerful and genuine, the way they did on television. They were the only people I wanted to go up and talk to. They seemed like friends, because l'd seen them so often on the TV. But I knew that was an illusion. Real life is different. So I walked about instead, counting my fellow prizewinners.

There were thirty-seven teenagers and ten adult organisers, including Neil and Georgie. There were actually fifty prizewinners, but the other thirteen were travelling on another flight. I decided I was in the rainforest already, or else in a zoo. Maybe I was a new young animal, freshly arrived, and I had to find the enclosure where I belonged. I spotted a baby giraffe, a wolf cub, a slinky green-eyed lizard, a couple of pointy-nosed, mischievous young lemurs; a pouchy-faced boy with tufty auburn hair who looked amazingly like a guinea pig, the kind with the fur sticking up in rosettes. There was one sad girl with big eyes and smooth fair hair sitting by a set of beige pigskin suitcases (while the rest of us had backpacks and nylon stuff-bags), who was like a baby seal - beautifully dressed and totally helpless. There was an awkward, gangly boy with a huge nose, Reading Section: spend $\mathbf{3 0}$ minutes answering these questions. Answer the following questions. Use full sentences when you are asked to do so.

1. Read the first paragraph of the extract again and answer the following questions.
a) How many weeks would the group of teenagers be spending together? (1 mark) $\square$
b) How many prizewinners were there? (1 mark)

3. These words are used in the extract. Give another word or phrase for each one which has a similar meaning. (3 marks)

| Word | Another word or phrase with a  similar meaning |
| :---: | :---: |
| chattering (line 17) |  |
| genuine (line 19) |  |
| helpless (line 31) |  |
|  |  |

4. In line 11, the narrator says: "Now I was beginning to feel scared." Explain what she is now feeling scared about. (2 marks)
$\qquad$
5. Read lines 16-22 in paragraph three again. Explain why the narrator decides not to speak to the TV presenters who are also on the trip. (2 marks)

6. In line 21-22, the writer says: "So I walked about instead, counting my fellow prizewinners." What do we learn about the narrator from these lines? (1 mark)
$\qquad$
7. Read lines 22-26 again. The narrator says: "I decided I was in the rainforest already, or else in a zoo." What does this line suggest about the other people in the airport? (1 mark)

8. Read the following lines from the final paragraph again:
"Maybe I was a new young animal, freshly arrived, and I had to find the enclosure where I belonged. I spotted a baby giraffe, a wolf cub, a slinky green-eyed lizard, a couple of pointy-nosed, mischievous young lemurs; a pouchy-faced boy with tufty auburn hair who looked amazingly like a guinea pig, the kind with the fur sticking up in rosettes."

Identify four adjectives from this section and write them in the table below. (4 marks)

9. Read the following lines from the final paragraph:
"There was one sad girl with big eyes and smooth fair hair sitting by a set of beige pigskin suitcases (while the rest of us had backpacks and nylon stuff-bags), who was like a baby seal - beautifully dressed and totally helpless."

What impression do we get of the girl in these lines? Give two impressions and use evidence (quotations/words) from the text to support each idea. (4 marks)

| Impression | Evidence |

10. Read these lines from the end of the extract again:
"There was an awkward, gangly boy with a huge nose, carrying a fluorescent orange puffa jacket, who looked like a new-born wildebeest, stumbling over his own legs."

The narrator thinks that this boy does not seem to fit in with the others. Choose two quotations which suggest this and write them in the table. (2 marks)
